

This session will address the long-standing challenge of public communication on radiation, waste management, environmental protection, and other “top of mind” issues related to nuclear technology. How can we better understand our audience, listen to its needs, and engage it in a meaningful two-way discussion? This topic reflects a growing recognition that social licence is as important as regulatory licence, if Canadians and the rest of the world are to realize the full potential of nuclear science and technology.